

WE EACH AND ALL ARE PERFECT AND FALLIBLE.
EMBRACE THE PARADOX.¹

INTERPOLATION ON BRAND THEORY

Brands exist as guests of culture; and culture—its many perceptions and proclivities, its quirks and its considerations—is restless and fickle and peckish and engagingly so; and commerce is as much a part of culture as is any one individual. We bear similar traits. We want the same things. And at the same time, we want to be unique. ¶ It's a paradox. One can say that her new black suede Banana Republic bag will set her apart; at the same time, she will have conformed; inasmuch as commerce propagates the same tenet, it mass-produces that same bag. A well-considered brand embraces the inconsistencies inherent to basic human behaviors: the paradoxical pairings of commonality and singularity, ubiquitousness and uniqueness. ¶ Embrace the paradox. Contrary to prevailing wisdom, communications—be they manifest in pixels or on paper—are at their best as expressions of complex, fallible, imperfect, exacting, endearing human behavior, not merely of algorithms.

I am a writer, a conversationalist, and a storyteller. I am a designer of artifacts, structures, and strategies. I can take a picture or draw one. I can build a brand and, with some help, a site or App. I once built a house. The knowledge I possess is the result of curiosity, resourcefulness, intuition, and a nagging dissatisfaction with the status quo. This is how I shape my contributions; this is how I measure success; this how I stay tuned to shifts in our culture, the restless shiver that precedes an awakening. ¶ I work with companies in over-crowded marketplaces where there proliferates meaningless catchphrases, artificial promises, and ubiquitous service offerings. ¶ My industry is similar. Ideas are subordinate to arbitrary aesthetics. Media, print or digital, is selected by default. I have worked in many medias¹, some just because and some because they were just and right and served the purpose. The best of what we do grows from the bottom up; it happens organically. Acknowledge the goal; considered strategies determine form. Articulate truth. It so happens that truth is interesting. ¶ We are likely a good match if you believe, as I do, that creativity and authenticity open minds and start dialogues, and every articulation of your brand is an opportunity to kick up some dust and stir some souls.

1 Comprehensive brand services: audits; internal and customer polling via direct contact and online surveys; (re)positioning and forward-looking strategies; verbal, visual, and tactical guidelines (often combined with visual communications guidelines); and comprehensive brand workshops. Identities: corporate business systems; logo marks, and other proprietary service marks and trademarks; and naming. Corporate letters and spoken word. Corporate literature of all ilk. Events: direct marketing; navigational patterns and directional signage; electronic data exchange (including social media integration); on-site print and e-components; and promotional literature. Digital media (e.g., websites, Apps, and the like); site architecture; content generation; design and development; search engine optimization; pay-per-click; and social media strategies and integration. Packaging. Traditional and e-enabled advertising. Writing and editing. And things we have yet to conceive.

Dave Salanitra is an accomplished creative professional whose 32-year tenure comprises architecture, the fine arts communications design, and publishing. ¶ As founder and the creative force behind the prolific Oh Boy agency, his clients spanned from the Fortune-ranked to the entrepreneurial. He conceived of and brought to market Oh Boy Artifacts—a brand of upmarket paper products and housewares that premiered to raves from his peers, the trade, and the public. ¶ Reviews for Salanitra's extended portfolio are no less favorable. His work has been called “as intelligent as it is elegant” and “at once sophisticated though without pretense, informative and accessible, and witty—if not laugh-out-loud funny.” ¶ He has lectured at University of San Francisco and University of California Berkeley, among other notable academic venues and trade events. ¶ Salanitra holds 245 commendations for design excellence, among them, a National Silver ADDY. He is well-represented alongside his peers in the permanent collection of the Denver Art Museum.

1 My work with Accenture/Anderson Consulting was primarily to do with marketing enterprise software solutions by proxy; the same is true of my relationships with KPMG and Commerce One. I worked directly with Baan to market their aerospace and defense integrated supply chain solution.

2. IF YOU DON'T COUNT YOURSELF AS BELONGING TO YOUR OWN DEMOGRAPHIC, YOU ARE PROBABLY IN THE WRONG BUSINESS.

3. AVOID THE HERD MENTALITY. INVEST YOUR TIME IN 50 FOCUS GROUPS OF ONE, NOT ONE FOCUS GROUP OF 50.

4. EMBRACE THE BANAL BY ABDICATING THE WORD BANAL.

5. SHOUT.

6. METHODOLOGIES ARE TO THE BIG IDEA¹ AS A BIT IS TO A STALLION. BREAK FREE OF CASTES; UNBRIDLE CREATIVITY.

7. NOW LOUDER.

8. BOLD, BARE TRUTHS INSPIRE ACTION.

9. EFFECTIVE SOLUTIONS LIE SOMEWHERE BETWEEN INTELLECT AND INTUITION.

1 INTERPOLATION WITH DUE REGARD TO THE CLICHÉ “BIG IDEA,” WHICH DESPITE HACKNEYED PHRASEOLOGY HAS BIG IDEA MERIT

Innovation, whether favorable or unfortunate, whether born in think tanks or at kitchen tables, begins with an epiphany—the Big Idea. ¶ Big Ideas are about resonance—connecting with people on an emotional level by gleaning what it is that make people tick. Throw away scripts. Participate in spontaneous conversations and look to the gaps and sidelong glances for deeper truths. Study and compare these parcels of knowledge. Big Ideas tap into real-life daily concerns—things that make people laugh with abandon or think hard enough to cry.

2 Re. Singularity: I am reasonably confident asserting items 1 (q.v. p1), 2, 4, 6, and 10 as rare if not altogether unexpressed dogma among my peers. Notwithstanding similitude to industry banter, per items 3, 5, 7-9, and 11, the phraseology, when spoken in earnest, as it is here, is worth repeating.

“Dave Salanitro is one of the rare few designers who does not limit his obligations to the surface of the page. He considers problems holistically, and his solutions are inspired. Because he assumes the responsibility to acquire what knowledge is necessary to properly execute a project, the result is never without strong strategic underpinnings. Dave has a fine eye for form and a finely tuned ear for lyrical copy. His visions are rich and detailed. Moreover, he never fails to realize them completely.”

—Maria Pavlick Client, Brand Consultant and former Creative Director, Cadence worldwide

“I have never worked with a creative consultant quicker or more insightful than David Salanitro. He demonstrates a keen understanding of client needs and market realities. David possesses a unique ability to translate intangible assets into concrete, value-added strategies and solutions that are accessible to every audience, and unfailingly benefit brand value.”

—Tracy Iseler, Client, and Partner in the Global CRM Service Line, Accenture worldwide

“Dave’s talents surpass brilliant: as a writer he is ingenious and quick-witted; as a designer he is dexterous and fearless; as a strategist he is intuitive and unfailingly spot-on. As an individual and as a collaborator he is a pleasure.”

—Jean Orlebeke, Confrère, and Owner, Obek Design

“Dave Salanitro is the ideal blend of realist and visionary. He dug deep to unearth our story, and by example, he motivated us to do our homework. He delivered a brilliant volume of stories that reflected our culture and spoke to our clients better than we ourselves have in the firm's 24 years. Dave has my undying gratitude for finding the emotive note in wealth management.”

—Sam Murty, Client, Managing Director, Orgel Wealth Management

“David’s work is as intelligent as it is elegant, two precious attributes that rarely come together in today’s ready-made world.”

—Dana Arnett, Founder and Partner, VSA Partners

Salanitro's client roster brings together companies in 15 major market sectors, from the Fortune-ranked to the entrepreneurial, all as varied in size as they are in purpose.

Salanitro holds 245 commendations for design excellence,¹ among them highest honors in the Mead, Potlatch, and Black Book AR100 annual report shows. He is the recipient of numerous ADDYs, including the National Silver prize² for Oh Boy Artifacts, for which he was also awarded 10 Best in Show Honors — two at Artifacts’ New York and London debuts. He swept the San Francisco Ad Club’s San Francisco Show 15 and took home five of the seven top commendations, among them Best in Show, the Gold, and the Silver awards. Salanitro’s work has been featured in 116 national and international dailies, periodicals, and volumes. It is included in the permanent collection of the Denver Art Museum.

He has been thrice named among the Nation’s Top 50 Designers to Watch, though by a publication of questionable repute. Liberally applying the maxim The More The Better, Salanitro asserts that the three designations, whatever their due regard, tally up to at least one commendation of the highest merit.

² Expectations regarding this catalog are low—though pains were taken to address the assumed preferences of both the marathon linguist and the attention deficient show-me-don’t-tell-me type. You might prefer to gloss over the visual excess (intentional), taking note of particular achievements. If you’re fond of reading dictionaries, phone books, or criminal code, you might enjoy a more thorough read.

Note that exceptional achievements (Best in Show, Gold, First Place, Medals of Honor, and such awards that are accompanied by a substantial monetary prize) are indicated in medium-faced, gold-like type thusly: Pulitzer Prize for a deeply influential body of work by an American designer; lesser but nonetheless exceptional achievements (Silver awards/medals, Second Place, etc.) are indicated in book-faced silver type, (e.g., National Book Award Nominee); other awards are not indicated except by their inclusion, which is not to diminish their merit.
